Advocating for Young Children in Ohio's State Budget Process

4/21/2025

Introduction: Why Testify?

Testifying before the Ohio legislature is a powerful way to share your voice and advocate for policies that support young children and families. Legislators rely on personal stories and expert insights to shape budget decisions. Your testimony can help secure funding for early learning, child care, maternal and infant health, and family support programs.

What to Expect in the Budget Process

1. Standing Committee Hearings - The House and Senate each have standing committees of jurisdiction that hear budget testimony related to specific state agencies and programming. Many of these committees offer opportunities for public testimony related to the state budget and other legislation.
  - In the Ohio House, many children's issues and programming are heard in the Committees on Children & Human Services, Health, Education & Workforce, and Medicaid.
  - In the Ohio Senate, programming that falls under the Department of Children and Youth will be heard in the Health Committee this budget cycle.
  - Tax issues that impact children and families, such as the Child Tax Credit introduced in Governor DeWine's budget, are heard in Ways & Means Committee in the Ohio House and Government Oversight Committee in the Ohio Senate.
2. Finance Committee Hearings - Each chamber also hosts a finance committee that is tasked with hearing the budget in its entirety and whose members can offer amendments to the budget bill. There are fewer opportunities to offer public testimony to this larger committee. Its members may not mirror the standing committee of jurisdiction related to children's issues.
3. Public Testimony Opportunities - There are designated times when the public can present written and/or oral testimony to influence funding decisions. These are noted separately from state agency testimony hearings and the Groundwork team will alert our network when these opportunities are announced in both the House and the Senate.
4. Conference Committee - The leadership from both parties in each chamber will appoint "conferees" to iron out differences in their version of the budget bill. This committee will meet in June and also work closely with the Governor's office to negotiate a final budget bill. Public testimony opportunities at this point in the process are slim.

Tips for Writing and Delivering Testimony

Writing Effective Testimony

- Be Clear and Concise – Aim for one or two pages. Testimony should take no more than 3 minutes to deliver aloud when you practice in advance.
- Start with a Strong Opening – Introduce yourself, your connection to the issue, and why you care.
- State Your Ask – Clearly state what you are asking the legislators to fund or do. Feel free to copy and paste the from Groundwork Ohio's Key Budget Priorities (included below in the Template).
- Tell a Personal Story – Share real-life experiences to illustrate the impact of investments in early childhood.
- Use Data – Support your argument with facts, such as how increasing child care access improves workforce participation.
- End with a Call to Action and Gratitude – Urge legislators to prioritize funding for young children and families. Thank the committee for their time and consideration.

Delivering Oral Testimony

- Prepare in Advance – Practice reading your testimony aloud.
- Keep It Under 3 Minutes – Most committees allow only a few minutes per speaker.
- Stay Professional and Respectful – Legislators appreciate constructive advocacy.
- Engage with Legislators – Make eye contact and be open to follow-up questions.
- Print extra copies – Be sure you have a printed copy for yourself as well as a few additional copies. Legislators will be following along on their iPads and your submission will be published on the committee website, but you never know whether a staffer or fellow stakeholder might like a copy of your remarks that day.
- Anticipate Questions – Legislators are offered the opportunity to ask questions of all witnesses. Direct your response “through the Chair, to the Representative / Legislator.” If you do not know the answer, offer to follow up with the Chair's staff after the meeting, who will circulate your response to the full committee.
